Synopsis

Politics makes strange bedfellows. Who wouldâ€™ve thought that Liz Cheney, who voted with Trump 97% of the time during his four years in office would become a liberal hero for standing up to his lies and autocratic desires? And Facebook makes a big show out of its decision to uphold the former presidentâ€™s suspension. But itâ€™s all just a big sideshow for the fact that Zuckerberg and Co donâ€™t want to have to change how they do business. Now theyâ€™re in a nightmare scenario of their own making. Finally, progressive superstar journalist David Corn drops by Mea Culpa to discuss Don Jrâ€™s legal troubles, the Facebook decision and much, much more.
