Today is the worst day of Robin Kincaid's life. She's supposed to fly to Seattle to finalize her divorce so her two-timing husband can marry his pregnant secretary. But when Mt. Redoubt erupts, all planes in or out of Anchorage are grounded. Robin isn't going anywhere until tomorrow. Then, there are no hotel rooms available, this being the height of tourism season in Alaska. Reluctantly, Robin agrees to share a suite with fellow stranded traveler and wealthy businessman, Charlie Land. As for Charlie, he's got one day to convince this oh-so-desirable woman that life's too short to live in the painful past. She's his tour guide; he's the salve for her broken heart. Both of their lives will be changed forever during a beautiful day in Alaska.
