Welcome to our 15-part deep-dive literary analysis of Sarah J. Maas's bestselling romantasy novel, A Court of Mist and Fury (ACOMAF). In this episode, we cover chapters 16 through 18, as Feyre meets Rhysand's Inner Circle and descends into Prythian's darkest depths to face the Bone Carver—an encounter that will reshape everything she thought she knew. With 13 years of combined academic literary experience and two literary lenses guiding our discussion, best friends Jac and Amy examine how Sarah J. Maas blends mythology, character archetypes, and emotional vulnerability to expand the world. As Feyre begins to trust new allies and confront the trauma she carries, we explore what it means to find purpose in a new identity—and how truth can emerge from even the most monstrous places. Perfect for fans of A Court of Thorns and Roses (ACOTAR), fantasy romance, BookTok favorites, and readers who love smart, nuanced conversation about popular books by women.

Chapter Description: With trepidation, Feyre meets the rag-tag group of individuals Rhysand considers his Inner Circle. Despite their long history together and complicated relationships, Feyre feels a connection to each that convinces her she can work with them—and with Rhysand. Though they experience an initial setback during their first attempt to enter the Prison, Feyre and Rhysand face the depths of Prythian's most dangerous domain to confront the Bone Carver. Unspeakable truths are shared that bring Feyre and Rhysand closer to each other and pave the way for their next adventure. Share your thoughts for a chance to be featured!
