Cody Burns is a voice actor who lucked into his dream gig. He works from home, sets his own schedule, and parties every night like the ship is going down. So what if he's a little late turning work in to his agent every once in a while? He's got the golden pipes and is in demand. When a competing agent contacts him out of the blue with a once in a lifetime offer and the answer to getting out from under the thumb of his current representation, Cody is more than intrigued.

The mysterious agent takes care of his every whim keeping Cody happy, on task, and working hard. The only caveat being he cannot miss a deadline without having certain and specific penalties levied against him. It all seems well and good, until he discovers the job is filled with mounting degrees of difficulty that challenge his talent, sanity, and the time constraints he's given.

Following threats, vandalism, and the death of an actress whose story strangely mirrors his, he realizes working with the new agent is not what he expected, especially when missing the next deadline could be the end of the line for him.
