Synopsis

"Some believe a less-than five mile stretch of this road either is - or has become - some kind of a paranormal corridor or conduit. An area where, for whatever reason, it's easier for spirits to access or stay."

What is going on on Dice Road, in Michigan? Dan takes us all on a terrifying journey, telling us three tales that all take place on Dice Road. There is the tale of the Pommeraning Family, who seem to be having a bit of trouble in their home. Many people are witness to the paranormal activity but no one seems to be able to find the source. Is it real? Where is it coming from? Why is it happening? Then, just about two miles down the road, in either direction, there are two other big tales of paranormal activity. What a crazy place to live, to be totally surrounded by possible ghosts, hauntings, sightings and more!

On the back half of the show, Lynze has two super spooky tales. Dan has a hard time even focusing on the tales because of some strange activity in the studio that occurs during his half of the show. Lynze shares a tale of a haunted house where multiple people have seen the same ghost, over and over. What happens when the ghost of the house starts to escalate her behavior? In story two, we find ourselves in the midst of a story that affects three generations of family members, simultaneously. Is it possible to be deeply connected to others in a way that makes your most terrifying moments a shared experience?

Opening Sumerian protection spell (adapted):
"Whether thou art a ghost that hath come from the earth, or a phantom of night that hath no home; or one that lieth dead in the desert; or a ghost unburied; or a demon or a ghoul; Whatever thou be until thou art removed; thou shalt find here no water to drink; Thou shalt not stretch forth thy hand to our own; Into our house enter thou not. Through our fence, breakthrough thou not; we are protected though we may be frightened. Our life you may not steal, though we may feel SCARED TO DEATH."
