One letter that altered my life.

A fake birth certificate.

A father I never knew about.

And four brothers who were the same age as I was.

At 33 years old, I was the CEO of Sterling Capital, thanks to my uncle who took me under his wing and introduced me to the world of investing. He was somewhat of a father figure since my mother never married and told me my father was a stranger sheâ€™d met in a bar.

After the sudden passing of my mother, I found out who my father really was. A man named Henry Kind, whom she had a brief affair with all those years ago. A man who left her to start a family with another woman. I was his blood, his son, and he was going to know exactly who I was when the time was right. But I needed to devise a plan to work my way into my newly found familyâ€™s lives.

Buying a house down the beach from them was a start, and so was charming a beautiful woman who was close to themâ€”a woman who was unbelievably sexy in so many ways. Iâ€™d use her to get to them, gain their trust, and take over my fatherâ€™s company. The one thing I didnâ€™t count on was falling for Jenni Benton in more ways than one. Then all hell broke loose after sheâ€™d found the letter my mother had left me.

I had two choices: either leave her and everything behind or stay and fight the war I started.

"The thing about betrayal is that it will always come from those close to you." (Samuel Zulu)
