Mack Wiebe wanted to leave an oral history of his life for his grandkids. He sat down and started to write. As his memories flooded back, he wrote more, a lot more in a wonderful raconteur style. It all started growing up in poverty in the Great Northwest during the 1940s, then being in the Army during the Korean War, followed by football, coaching, golf, a fantastic string of luck, and a roaring ride of entrepreneurship.

Yes, Mack's grandkids have the opportunity to read and now to hear, in detail, what stock they are from. For others, this audiobook could be a fun listen about a life full of surprises, heart-warming experiences, and a life worth the re-telling.
