Signal detected, target sighted Lee Romeo™ Tarrant was positive that the woman before him was his unwanted blind date - until she told him he was acting like a child. What kind of introduction was that? He hadn't felt such an instant attraction so fast, nor cooled his ardor, not since he lost his wife. Having the one good thing in his world stolen away - he never expected to feel that missing ember rekindled again with a single glance.

Approach objective carefully and use caution

Dixie Lancaster knew this had to be a mistake - or the man hitting on her was in for a rude awakening. Being widowed was hard enough to cope with and brought new challenges. Crushing the morale of this persuasive and gorgeous man was not what she signed up for as her sister's bridesmaid.

She wasn't looking for a relationship - and never expected to find someone that understands what she is going through right now - until she discovers that the mouthy but mysterious Adonis is also grieving, too.

Could two unexpected strangers become the best of friends - or perhaps something more?
