

Ghost Track: Melissa

author: David Graffham

2026-06

Synopsis

author	David Graffham
readBy	David Bufton
inLanguage	english

"Where's my vengeance? My payback for what they did?"

Rush hour on the London Underground can be hell...

Brilliant Detective Leyland Francis is returning to the National Crime Agency after recovering from serious injuries he suffered in the line of duty.

His morning commute is interrupted by an unusual contact with a beautiful young woman, setting in motion a series of events which lead him to be involved in a murder investigation headed up by his close friend, DCI Phil Mercer. An investigation which leads to a terrible realization for the troubled Francis.

Working hard to prove his abilities again, Leyland, with his hard-drinking and straight-talking friend and their team, takes to the streets of London and quickly spirals into a world of deceit, corruption, double-crossing, the criminal underworld, and personal demons in an attempt to bring justice to a young murder victim.

Aided by a former CIA operative cut loose in London and a fiery-tempered journalist, Leyland fights against kidnap, incarceration, and the persistent attempts of an ambitious and cold occupational health director with a personal agenda determined to kick him off the force. Mercer battles the bottle, bullets, and the top brass breathing down his neck for answers on the case, and quickly.

All paths lead to a shocking, bloody, and explosive showdown at the heart of the city.

Reader's comments

comment 1:

â€"â€" ()