This is a heartwarming story about Anne and her husband Dan who have been married for 15 years and have given up hope of ever having children. In early January, Anne begins waking up sick every day and after a month decides she better go and see her doctor. She waits for a week for the test results and can't believe the news that she's finally pregnant after all these years!
Their miracle baby is born nine months later, and they name her Honey, which is fitting since Dan is a beekeeper. Little do they know that their sweet precious girl, Honey, will surprise them with her unique abilities. It begins when Honey is five and secretly toddles after her papa who is on his way to take care of his bees. Dan nearly faints when he turns to see his little Honey covered in bees. To his utter astonishment, she is giggling and laughing as the bees continue to cover her and follow her every move. Honey loves the bees, and they love her. She has a special way of communicating with them and they always appear when she needs them the most.
You won't want to miss the excitement when the bees come to rescue Honey from the school bullies at recess. This is only the beginning of the many amazing adventures you'll read about in this fun and entertaining book! Honey also meets her first crush in junior high school and wonders if it's possible to fall in love at first sight. By the end of the book, you'll love Honey and especially the bees, and you'll wish there were more chapters!
