

I

author: Waeil Borhan

2026-06

Synopsis

| author | Waeil Borhan |
|------------|--------------|
| readBy | Josh Heisler |
| inLanguage | english |

This is a book about being proactive, not reactive. To have choices, you must find your own questions, or you will be merely adopting those of others who have found theirs. This is, therefore, also an audiobook about questions.

By asking questions, I aim to assist you in generating your own and transforming your life into a series of questions. This is a book about questions, not about answers. I believe that asking the right questions is more important than finding the right answers.

To move from being an object to being a subject, you must have choices. This book is also about those choices. In this audiobook, I will do everything I can to challenge your heart and lead you from the shadow of safe answers to the light of questions. Answers lead more to endings; questions lead more to beginnings. This is a book not about the clarity of black and white, but the deceptiveness of grey.

It is also a book about courage: the courage to call things by name. The courage to diagnose accurately. The courage to find a cure, confront and tame the self, move from being an object to being a subject, shift from unconsciousness to awareness, seek your own questions, and to cultivate the courage to choose and to try - the courage to fail, again and again and again, to learn from failure, and turn it into success.

Most importantly, this is a book about God, and God's purpose for you. I plan to ask you some questions and present some theories. My own answers to these questions are not the answers; they are my own attempt at answers, right or wrong. I am not presenting them to you for your agreement, but rather, to generate new questions within you.

Reader's comments

comment 1:

â€"â€" ()