Twenty-five years ago, Susie and a few feminist friends planned an unusual party: "Let's have men serve tea in the nude, and they can only speak to the women guests when spoken to." Sounds like a hoot, right? But wait - it also started a movement called CFNM (Clothed-Female-Naked-Man). Planning the party was fun! Who to invite? Who to select as the "slaveboys"? Susie recalls all the details of the infamous party.

Then, just what is this CFNM movement? An article by Garth May in The Debrief (thedebrief.co.uk), questions whether Clothed-Female-Naked-Man fetishes really are feminist. There is a power play involved, but Susie says fantasies are neither feminist or non-feminist. Many elements and strategies can tilt the deck either way: humiliation, subservience, and objectification. Wanna give this fetish a try?
