In April of 1996, Martin Bryant perpetrated an unimaginable mass shooting in Port Arthur, Tasmania that shocked Australia and the world. Bryant's actions left 35 dead and many people wounded. It caused changes in Australia's gun laws, and left many pointing the finger at agencies they felt could have stopped Bryant at different points in time. Join Mike and Gibby as they discuss Martin Bryant and the Port Arthur massacre. In this second and final episode, we'll focus on the events of that dreadful day. We'll also discuss the changes in Australian gun law that resulted and the conspiracy theories that have cropped over the years. One of the biggest questions that is difficult to answer is, what was Bryant's exact reason for committing the mass shooting?
