Avery Shaw thought she'd seen it all. Then she gets the sort of call she never expected.

Buried in a part of the city she never visits, across the road from the Dairy Queen of all places, is Antique Dolls. It's a niche strip club featuring dancers over the age of 40 and a very unique clientele.

When a masked intruder comes barreling into the club firing a gun and hits the owner, Avery is intrigued. When she gets to the hospital and hears that the local police secreted away a politician under the cover of flashing lights and jurisdiction problems, she's practically frothing at the mouth.

Finding a motive for the shooting should be easy, but when a secretive lifestyle minister inserts himself into the investigation, Avery is left spinning. He's got a colorful past and an army of followers willing to fight for him.

What he doesn't have is Avery Shaw. She's determined to uncover the truth, even if it means putting herself in danger. When Grandpa and Mario decide to help Mario going as far as to position himself as an undercover dancer Avery has more backup than she bargained for.

Information is coming at her from all sides, and so is danger.

Avery Shaw doesn't lose. This time, however, there might not be a winner.
