What is the one thing all law enforcement officers have in common? Each know they may not come home if they do their jobs and fulfill their oaths of office. In the first volume of author, cop, and lawyer Lance J. LoRusso's new series True Crime Tales, LoRusso weaves true-life tales based on experiences law enforcement officers all over the country endure every day - be it coming face to face with a sociopathic killer, hunting down a child predator, or grieving the loss of a fallen brother in blue, the limits of these heroes' bravery and dedication to the law know no bounds. Each story taps into the psyche of the men and women behind the uniform, and sometimes even the perpetrator. In "Running", LoRusso steps into the viewpoint of a cop killer on the run, while in "Parallax", a team of officers must outmaneuver a crazed robber holding up a bank. The catch? An officer's daughter is inside. No matter the narrator - lawyer, perp, or cop - each story is written with poignancy and depth, showcasing LoRusso's own extensive experience in the realm of law enforcement. Parallax, volume one of True Crime Tales, delivers the spectrum of human emotion - anguish, love, terror, and gratitude - that each and every law enforcement officer experiences in his day-to-day life, one story at a time.
