Cathy can see demons. Nobody else can, or even believes her, which is why she's restrained in a mental hospital. That is, until she discovers she has the power to teleport through time. Now unrestrained, she meets Wes, the only other person who can see the demons. But using these powers comes with consequences.

The price of Cathy using her powers? Attention. From the demons, from the government, from Angels, and from a homicidal woman named Kline with powers stronger than Cathy's who tells them the horrible truth about themselves - they aren't entirely human. Cathy and Wes are half-angel, with all the trouble that brings along with it.

Can Cathy, Wes, and even Kline learn to utilize their angelic power to stop an ancient God from re-asserting its destructive power over Earth? Or will their simple existence as hybrids be too much to keep the balance of power in check?
