When lives intersect, what promise, love, and damage can they cause each other and overcome?

Brigid Fitzpatrick had made a life for herself following the death of her soulmate, keeping busy with her bookstore, family, and friends. She had not considered her life missing anything until two things happen: A mysterious stranger comes to town, and Brigid starts receiving attention from an unknown admirer.

Samantha Bailey walks the streets day after day, and Brigid is filled with many questions. The most important one is why the woman never stops her seemingly aimless journey? As Brigid's friendship with Samantha grows, so does the attention from the unknown admirer. An admirer watching from the dark shadows.

Brigid finds her feelings for Samantha moving from friendship to something more. But will she let herself move on, or will she cling to the comfortable life she has made for herself? Can love overcome the pain and anguish that comes next?
