Peace has come to Promise Falls, and Trey hates every minute of it. What is a War Wolf supposed to do with peace? His entire Pack has paired up and seems perfectly fine with settling down into a quiet life—but inside of him, his wolf is howling for war, and he must find it wherever he can to keep the animal sated. The Pack is worried, his Alpha is worried, and sometimes, even Trey is worried about the path he's choosing, but it cannot be helped. His wolf needs more. And when a ghost from his past stumbles into his territory, he has to face the demons she stirs up inside of him. Freya has grown into a gorgeous woman, sure—but she's not like he remembered. She used to be human, but now she's harboring a monster inside of her. The more of her secrets he uncovers, the more he's realizing he is to blame for the chaos falling onto Promise Falls.

Freya has signed up with a matchmaker to find a mate, but just an hour in Leadville, Colorado, tells her she's been horribly tricked. Fate has dragged her into the territory of her nightmare. Trey is different than she remembers, but all she has are blurry memories from when she was a human. Too many outside sources are involved in pushing them to confront each other, and she can't trust anyone. Least of all the handsome, charming, damaged werewolf who started all of this—Trey.

The Wolves of Promise Falls comes full circle with exposed secrets that dig into the heart of the Pack—because as always, nothing is as it seems in Stark's Mountains.

Don't miss this riveting final installment in T. S. Joyce's bestselling Wolves of Promise Falls series.

Content Warning: Explicit love scenes, naughty language, and piles of sexy shifter secrets. Intended for mature audiences.
