After building a career in the galleries and museums of Amsterdam, art theorist Hanna has returned to Iceland to what she hopes will be a posh new job. Though small, the museum in Reykjavik has a sterling reputation - one sure to be burnished by a valuable piece donated by a wealthy patron. Painted by Icelandâ€™s most beloved 20th-century artist, the acquisition is poised to become the jewel of the museumâ€™s collection - until a conservator announces itâ€™s a fake. Determined to preserve the museumâ€™s reputation and bolster her own, Hanna delves deep into the shadowy world of art forgery, where she will discover an unexpected truth framed by a half-century of lies.
