Her next-door neighbor has predicted that Annabelle is destined to live her life as an old maid. Not true, Annabelle declares after hearing this from her neighbor's son. She's only forty-two and is just beginning a new life after caring for her invalid mother for years. Yearning for a social life and determined to prove her neighbor wrong, she signs up for a ballroom dancing class where she meets not one, but two eligible bachelors, both vying for her attention.

Luke is the new interim CEO at the local hospital, and Jake is a country music star hiding out in Park Place from the paparazzi after a failed relationship. Since neither plans to stay in Park Place long term, is Annabelle wasting her time? Or is love for a moment better than no love at all?

Meanwhile, a church in Paradise Cove is calling Rev Rock to be their new pastor. With a bigger salary and an oceanfront home, he and Liz can live their dream life. The church has called, but Rock hasn't yet heard God's call. Can he leave his faithful flock at Park Place Presbyterian? With a new baby on the way and the busyness of a pastor's life, can he quieten himself long enough to discern what God has in store?
